Market Place and markets

Boston's sweeping market place is the heart of the town - and has been so for centuries. From the fine market place you will notice the frontage of the buildings and the narrow lanes reflecting the medieval layout of the town. Once one of the wealthiest trading ports, second only to London, Boston's commercial centre still holds regular markets today. Wednesday and Saturday are the main market days, where you'll find traders selling local produce, fashion, household items and much more. There are also more stalls alongside an auction of a wide variety of items on Bargate Green each Wednesday and fortnightly craft markets throughout the summer. Market days are really vibrant and a great day to plan your visit to the town - the largest open air markets in Lincolnshire.

Medieval lanes and shopping

A thriving market town, Boston has the perfect combination of independent shops and high street names throughout the town and around the Market Place.

Medieval lanes branch off from the Market Place and are lined with small boutiques, places to eat and specialist stores.

Pescod Square, named after the medieval Pescod Hall, has many other well-known shops and places to eat.

On route to Boston retail park, where there are further national retailers, you pass through Wide Bargate with established shops and along Pen Street you'll find quirky and high-end boutiques. In the West Street area you'll find a fabulous mix of Eastern European restaurants and shops.

Country Parks and Pilgrim Fathers Memorial

Boston has two riverside country parks. Witham Way Country Park can be found just north of Grand Sluice and the Marina. It is the start of the Water Rail Way cycle and walking route to Lincoln and has woodland, meadows and picnic areas to the town and expected to form part of the new England Coast Path route. The park leads to the Pilgrim Fathers' Memorial, which marks the site where that group's first attempt to escape to freedom, initially to Holland, was thwarted. Leading to their arrest and subsequent trial and detention in Boston Guildhall.

Marina, maritime cruises and Grand Sluice

Grand Sluice can be seen up river from St Botolph's footbridge. It is more than 250 years old and a structure to control waters in the River Witham, separating the tidal Haven from the non-tidal river from Lincoln and beyond. Boston Gateway Marina is found above the Grand Sluice and ideally situated for access to the sea, and river with visitor moorings available.

The Boston Belle, operated by Maritime Leisure Cruises Ltd. offers exploration by river and sea with bird watching, seal spotting and lunch cruises available. The boat departs from Sluice Bridge, Witham Bank East (April- September).

Hussey Tower

The house was built in around 1450 by a wealthy Boston man called Richard Benyngton. But the tower, which is all that remains, takes its name from Sir John Hussey who owned the house after Richard Benyngton died.

Sir John Hussey was an important member of the court of Henry VIII, but he fell out of favour with the king at the time of the Reformation. The king accused him of treason after he failed to act quickly enough to put down the Lincolnshire Rising. He was tried, found guilty and executed in 1537.

Welcome to Boston

Welcome to Boston; a lively, historic port and market town located on the River Witham, joining the North Sea at a part of the coast known as The Wash.

Boston and its magnificent church are named after St Botolph, an Anglo Saxon monk, who according to tradition visited the area in the 7th Century.

In the early medieval period, only London was richer and more important than Boston as a port. Boston's wealth was based on wool and trade with Hanseatic League countries. St Botolph's Church (The Stump), Boston Guildhall and the town's stunning Market Place are just three examples of its medieval splendour. The large weekly markets each Wednesday and Saturday and its annual May Fair, also date from this period.

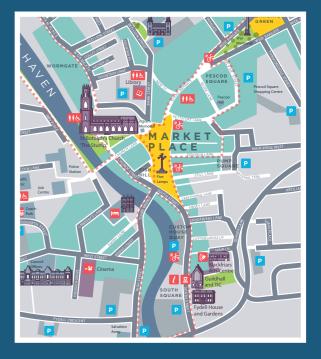

Boston today is a diverse and vibrant town to explore and discover, with a range of quality national and independent shops, wonderful dining experiences and a unique history and heritage.
